Young members of local carnival group, Tropical Isles, dance their way through the showcase

RESIDENTS got a colourful preview of this year's Hackney One Carnival. People who turned out for a day of activities in Gillett Square on 12 June were treated to a show-stopping display from local carnival group Tropical Isles, who will be playing a big part in Hackney's third annual carnival on 8 August. For more pictures, and to find out how you can get involved, see page 7

EAST FOR ARTS

By Emma Britton

THE CREATE10 summer festival of arts and culture has kicked off a packed programme of music, dance, theatre, talks and much more, which runs until 1 August.

Now in its third year, CREATE returns with highlights including 'Young London: Into Music' which will see local youth being mentored and then starring on stage alongside big names in grime, dubstep and indie at the world-famous O2 music venue.

CREATE Art Award winner and Hackney resident Robin Turner will also take to the borough's roads in a mobile library he has transformed into a mini arts space from 8 to 11 July. Stopping at Homerton hospital and Haggerston Park, he will offer visitors the chance to take part in nature activities such as talks and photography by day, while every evening there will be acoustic gigs, DJ sets, readings and more.

> "This cultural festival truly belongs to the people of the five host boroughs"

The festival takes place across the five host boroughs for the 2012 Games and stars home-grown, internationally acclaimed artists including singer Paloma Faith, artists Gavin Turk and Jason Bruges, and award-winning comedy team Punchdrunk.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "This cultural festival truly belongs to the people of the five host boroughs and I hope it will inspire many more of us to join in and take part in shaping a legacy for the arts from the 2012 Games."

Message from the Mayor

Cultural legacy for the 2012 Games

I WAS pleased to launch the CREATE10 festival this week. The festival is part of the London 2012 cultural programme which Hackney is helping to deliver in partnership with the four other host boroughs. It is designed to celebrate and promote Europe's largest cultural quarter – found here in the East End, and to deliver a programme of events designed to involve more of the community both as participants and spectators.

The aim is that the festival will grow each year and continue beyond 2012, to become an internationally renowned cultural event. The Council has always been clear that the Games must deliver a meaningful legacy, leaving behind not just sports venues, but also real improvements in the economic, social and cultural lives of residents.

CREATE10 offers a range of exciting and varied activities taking place over the next three months. Highlights include Dance Nations Dalston brought to Gillett Square by the Barbican, the 'Hackney's Here' exhibition by local schoolchildren and artists (above & see pg 15), underwater music at London Fields Lido, and the Shoreditch Festival. Young people will be able to gain hands-on experience and develop their musical skills through the urban music festival 'Young London: Into Music'.

There's also a wide programme of other leisure activities that the Council is laying on over the summer for young people to participate in. A 16 page pull-out guide with full details will be included in the next edition of Hackney Today. From rock-climbing to wheelchair basketball, circus activities to poetry workshops, I am sure you will find something of interest happening in a park, library, children's centre or leisure centre near you.

Hackney is known for its vibrant culture and it is important that opportunities are opened up as widely as possible to residents to explore all that the arts, sports and leisure have to offer. I hope that everyone will take full advantage of these opportunities to try out something new over the summer.

41 new homes

By James Willsher

DEMOLITION work has begun as part of a scheme to provide more than 40 new homes for social renting on a Hackney estate.

Bridport House, on Colville Estate, N1, is currently being demolished and rebuilt, replacing 20 flats with 41 new homes for residents, who have been temporarily re-housed.

Deputy Mayor of Hackney, Cllr Karen Alcock, paid a visit to the site on 15 June to see the progress being made – along with Maggie Worster, Chair of the Colville Estate Tenants and Residents Association (CETRA), and other CETRA members.

Miss Worster said: "This is the end of over nine years of work, and the start of the next phase. It's going to be the jewel of our crown."

Cllr Alcock added: "This is good news for residents as work is getting under way. The Council is committed to ensuring the continuing regeneration of our housing estates. I am delighted we are seeing the first new council housing being built for many years in Hackney, providing top quality homes for local people."

The new homes at Bridport House are expected to be completed by next summer.

The demolition work is part of a wider programme to build new social rented homes on several Hackney estates, also including Ottaway Court and Rendlesham House, which has received £16million in Government funding through the Government's Homes and Communities Agency (HCA) since September 2009.

By James Willsher

A SPLASH-TASTIC newly-refurbished paddling pool is making waves in Stoke Newington.

Residents young and old are enjoying cooling off in the warm weather at the newly re-opened facility, which is part of the ongoing £8.9million Clissold Park and House restoration project.

It has been re-painted, and a ramp for wheelchair users has been installed.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, was impressed with the facilities after visiting the pool on 5 June. He said: "It's great to see so many enjoying the pool. Our investment in Clissold Park and House will transform this already popular green space into a haven for children and families in Hackney."

The estate – first opened to the public in 1889 – is being restored to reflect its original architecture, with modern additions including a new cafe, better access for people with disabilities, and new function and meeting rooms for community use.

> "Investment will transform Clissold Park into a haven for children and families"

The transformation of the children's play area near the Church Street entrance to the park is major part of the restoration project. Due for completion in 2011, the new playground is set to include a sports zone to appeal to older children and teenagers, as well as natural play areas aimed at inquisitive young children.

The sports zone plans include an area for skateboarders, rollerbladers and BMX riders; football and basketball goals and table tennis tables.

A re-vamped animal enclosure and aviary are on the way, as well as a butterfly dome.

Other works planned as part of the joint investment by the Council and the Heritage Lottery Fund include maintenance of the New River and lakes, plus a refurbished bowls pavilion and kiosk.

Help Hackney hook a winner

HACKNEY'S entry in the Best of Borough (BOB) film competition needs support from residents.

Filmmaker Laura Evers Johns' short 'By Hook' follows a lonely, grouchy fishmonger (above) who falls in love – and is made to suffer the consequences by his rivals.

After being screened at the East End Film Festival in May, it's now up against other London boroughs in the Film London organised competition. Hackney has previous success in the contest, with Alex Taylor winning the prize last year for 'Kids Might Fly'.

The closing date for voting is 30 June and the BOB ceremony will be held at BAFTA in July where the winner will be announced. In addition, one voter will be chosen at random to attend the awards.

The film was funded as part of New Pathways, a partnership between Hackney, Tower Hamlets and Newham councils. Its aim is to promote home-grown filmmaking at grass roots level and provide, along with financial support, advice from industry professionals.

To watch all of the films and cast your vote, visit: www.filmlondon.org.uk/best_of_boroughs

Make it your business

BUSINESSES and entrepreneurs in the borough are being encouraged to enter an annual awards scheme that promotes the excellence and diversity of Hackney's small and medium-sized companies.

The fifth Mayor of Hackney's Business Awards launched on 7 June and nominations are open until 5pm on 9 July.

The wide range of categories recognises the unique mix of businesses in the borough as well as the entrepreneurial spirit of young people with a special category for 14 to 19-year-olds.

Previous winners include the renowned Holborn Studios, Thai restaurant Yum Yum, and Skinners' Company's School for Girls.

The prestigious judging panel includes famous faces from the business world like Pret a Manger founder Sinclair Beecham.

> "A really good way to push the green agenda in Hackney while having fun"

Children, adults and recycling characters enjoyed a range of activities at the fifth annual BeReCreative festival in London Fields on 5 June

Green for the day

By Gracia Douglas

MORE than 2,000 people turned out to enjoy fun activities in the sunshine, while finding out more about doing their bit for the environment.

Hackney's fifth annual BeReCreative event in London Fields on 5 June was a joint effort between the Council's Recycling Team and Green Champion network.

A drumming workshop with children was followed by a parade around the festival site. Recycling characters joined in as did most of the attendees, including children that had made decorations and costumes at the R-art stall.

The free festival showcased lots of stalls giving visitors the opportunity to pick up recycling tips and free cloth bags, as well as take part in activities.

"I come to this festival every year and it is a really good way to push the green agenda in Hackney while having fun," said one resident.

The Bike Doctor was also on hand with advice for cyclists, as was Doctor Compost for the green-fingered. Plus there was live music on a solar powered stage.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "I'm delighted so many residents visited the BeReCreative event and enjoyed taking part in activities to see how their contributions can help to reduce, reuse and recycle waste in Hackney. It is a popular and worthwhile event that supports our continuing efforts to help make the borough cleaner and greener."

A golden opportunity

Hackney's Festival for Older People is a chance to meet new friends and try out different activities

By James Willsher

FROM seaside trips, bingo and free cinema matinees, to a visit to the Olympic Park, dancing, and a quiz, there's something for all of Hackney's over-50s in the 16th annual Festival for Older People.

Starting on 21 June, and continuing throughout July, there are lots of events and activities planned including a tea dance at Stoke Newington Town Hall, following on from tremendously popular events held earlier this year and last. There's also reggae and soca dancing, and a bhangra dance class showcase being held at the newly renovated and reopened venue.

To mark National Falls Awareness Week from 21 to 25 June, older residents are being invited to an event being held at the John Scott Health Centre, Green Lanes, to find out more about reducing the risks of falling and exercise opportunities, as well as participating in a fall prevention exercise session.

Free film screenings will also be taking place at two venues in the borough, the Community Resource Team Hall, in Stoke Newington, and the Rio Cinema in Dalston.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "The Council is committed to ensuring older residents can lead healthy, independent lives, and the festival is a good opportunity to find out more about the range of exercise and leisure activities available in the borough."

Park life for all the people

RESIDENTS of all ages are invited to have a go at a range of free, fun outdoor activities, games and sports at Shoreditch Park and the Britannia Leisure Centre on Saturday, 10 July, from 11am until 5pm.

Part of the Council's Parks for Life summer events programme, the day will see dozens of local leisure, sports and activities groups offer free taster sessions, demonstrations, and mini-matches to encourage young people and adults to learn a new skill.

And experienced local coaches will be on hand to encourage absolute beginners and add grease to the elbows of those who may be a bit rusty.

Get adventurous by trying out capoeria, rock climbing, trampolining or mastering the art of fencing.

Give England a run for their money by taking part in mini-football games. Find your centre of balance and practice some new moves by trying out Judo or Tai Chi. Make the heart beat faster with beach volley ball, boot camp, circuit training, ping pong or wheelchair basket ball.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "This gives families a chance to try out all kinds of healthy activities that are already up and running in Hackney. It's all about enjoying yourself in the park and trying something new in a safe and family-friendly environment."

Honor Rhodes and John Alty

Trip to the palace for two Hackney people

TWO Hackney residents have been named in the Queen's Birthday Honours list for 2010.

Honor Rhodes will receive an OBE for services to children and families. She has spent many years working for local authorities in children and family services.

Director of Projects and Strategic Development at the Tavistock Centre for Couple Relationships, E1, as well as Non-Executive Director of NHS City and Hackney, she accepted the award 'on behalf of everyone who works in this field, sung and unsung heroes and heroines.'

She said: "I feel so honoured to be given an OBE, no pun intended, what it recognises, I think, is the work that people in the voluntary sector do."

John Alty, Chief Executive of the Intellectual Property Office at the Department of Business, Innovation and Skills was given an Order of the Bath for his public service work. He said: "I am delighted to have received this award. I hope that I have contributed over a lengthy career in Government to helping business and the economy grow and prosper, something which will be particularly important over the coming years."

Honours lists recognise merit, courage and service and are published twice a year at New Year and to mark the Queen's official birthday in June.

AN extravaganza of colourful costumes gave residents a taster of what's to come at this summer's Hackney One Carnival – and offered them a chance to get involved.

The showcase in Gillett Square on 12 June was led by local carnival group Tropical Isles who took part in a procession and dance performances to show off their bright head-dresses and vibrant costumes, which reflect the Caribbean heritage of communities in Hackney.

The afternoon performance was a preview for this year's carnival, which will kick off in Gillett Square on 8 August before proceeding through the streets to Hackney Downs Park. Now in its third year, the event brings together hundreds of performers from carnival groups across the borough as part of the Cultural Olympiad, which celebrates arts and culture, alongside sports, in the run up to the 2012 Games.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "Hackney One Carnival is about everybody coming together to celebrate the diverse cultures which make our borough so special."

This year there is a chance for local community groups to get involved with an exciting project celebrating the borough's diverse communities and to perform at Hackney One Carnival.'The World in Hackney' project is being run by the Council's 2012 Unit and carnival group Kinetika, and offers the chance for six community groups of 15 people to perform in stunning silk costumes inspired by the flags of continents and countries represented in the borough.

Dancing in the street

A good old-fashioned East End knees-up to celebrate Dalston's new transport connections

By Miranda Yates

RESIDENTS and visitors took part in a free street party, where the crowds were tempted to enjoy a tea dance, world cooking and heaps of family fun in sunny Dalston.

Children and pensioners, teenagers and East London trendies all barn danced, tea danced, and generally got down in their own individual style to the sounds of local bands and dance acts. These included eccentric folk band, Katy Carr and The Aviators; country 'hoe down' group Cut A Shine; and the Zong Zing All Stars – a Congolese dance band with sonic energy and a winning way with the crowd.

Award-winning Ashwin Street venue Cafe Otto did some great business, and the tea dance was a whirl of party dresses and dancehall memories relived.

Dalston was celebrating a new lease of life, brought about through investment in the town centre.

As well as new transport links, the Dalston Square development is creating more than 500 new homes, including affordable housing, a new library and archive, public square, and retail space.

The new London Overground opened on 23 May creating four new stations in Hackney – Dalston Junction, Haggerston, Hoxton, and Shoreditch High Street.

The line runs from Dalston Junction to West Croydon and Crystal Palace. It is due to be extended to Highbury and Islington by spring 2011, and to Clapham by 2012, with 16 trains an hour running through the borough by that time – equivalent to Tube frequency.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "The Council worked hard to secure improved transport for our borough and now we have the connections an inner London borough deserves.

> "We wanted to thank our residents for their patience and celebrate the opening of our new stations"

"We wanted to thank our residents for their patience during the works and to celebrate the opening of our new stations by inviting them to a free street party in the heart of Dalston."

The Dalston Connected festival was organised by the Council and supported by Transport for London, the London Development Agency, Barratt Homes and Arts Council England-funded music project Global Local.

Chas Gage (right) and Joe Buirski of 'hoe down' band Cut A Shine, got everyone up and into a country dancing frenzy. Chas said: "This is fab idea. We need more of this kind of thing – street parties in our neighbourhoods."

Theresa John (below) said: "I had to get up and move when I heard this music. I love it, I love it. It reminds me of where I'm from in St Lucia. Big Band. I used to dance with my husband to this kind of music every Saturday night at the town hall in the 1960s."

WALKING WORKS WONDERS!

Everyone knows walking's a great way to keep healthy, but it can be difficult to find the time and motivation to get started.

We've created the Get Walking pack especially for people who are not particularly active, to help you build up gradually and fit walking into your daily lives. It's also a great way to explore our community.

To register for your pack, visit: www.getwalking.org.uk

THE GET WALKING PACK CONTAINS:

- Full colour booklet with 12 week programme, tips and advice
- Step counter
- Logbook
- Postcards to spread the word to friends and family

- You'll just need to give a few details about yourself, your current activity levels and health.
- All information will be treated confidentially.
- Alternative information may be offered to those of you who are relatively fit.
- We are sorry, but we currently only have funding to provide packs to people living in England.
- Please allow 28 days for delivery.

Stoke Newington Women's Institute founder member Angela Rangecroft stands by a recently 'yarn bombed' tree

WI would you bother?

By Rosalind Stannard

THIS spring, after waiting in vain for years to get a sought-after allotment plot near Stoke Newington, Angela Rangecroft dug up her back garden and started sowing seeds.

"I decided not to wait any more," she explains. Last winter she and two friends realised there was no branch of the Women's Institute in Stoke Newington, and so she said 'right that's it – we're going to start one'.

Since then, like Angela's make-do allotment, the group has grown and flourished, and now has over 50 members.

There is a touch of rebellion in what Angela finds fun: whether it be yarn bombing a tree; guerrilla gardening in a park; or challenging the fuddy duddy image of the Women's Institute.

But cheekiness aside, there is a mix of serious stuff too – like campaigning for a rape crisis centre in Hackney, and helping save and re-launch the Sandbrook Playgroup earlier this year, which she clearly finds very rewarding.

"We worked really hard and it's exciting to offer something much more flexible that fits in with people's modern lives. It's a home-from-home and children feel comfortable there," she says.

Angela is a big believer in getting involved. "I've lived in this community for 20 years, and my feeling is that I might as well invest in it and look after it," she adds.

Her three children, aged 20, 18 and four, have grown up with her and her partner in Stoke Newington, and she has been closely involved in the schools they've attended.

> "I have lived in this community for 20 years, and I might as well look after it"

"When I moved here I recognised the need to be engaged with my children's education, and they have done very well."

The kids also enjoyed Woodcraft Folk and the youngest now goes to a newly-formed group for children under six, Woodchips. Angela says: "It's not like Brownies or Scouts. It does have camps and trips, but it's parent-led, it's non-competitive and mixed sex."

She speaks with pride of how Woodcraft Folk encouraged her son, when he was 11, to lobby at the Houses of Parliament for a mention of the climate change Bill in the Queen's speech.

"When he then saw it happen, he could see the democratic process working and recognise that he could be part of it," she says.

In October, Angela will start learning how to facilitate parenting courses with St Mary's Church, which involves sharing experiences and stories and encouraging discussions around different ways to engage children. It's clearly part of her recurring urge to give something back; help shape a community; and simply be part of a supportive network of many different kinds of people.

For work, Angela teaches media studies to 16 to 19-year-olds at Stanmore College in Middlesex. She's written in the national press about the challenges and rewards of teaching young people from the inner city, and is working on a book about parental engagement in education.

What does she do if she ever has a spare minute? She runs two or three times a week around the local park, reads and watches films. But is her life hectic and busy? Angela thinks not. "I tend not to fret or worry – it all sort of works out and comes together," she adds.

Cleaning up the town

Pupils from Mossbourne Academy learn about recycling and street cleaning in the Narrow Way as part of Capital Clean Up

By Felicity Jump

PUPILS from Mossbourne Academy, E5, joined Council staff and police from the Hackney Central Safer Neighbourhoods Team (SNT) to help tidy up the town centre.

The event was part of Capital Clean Up – now in its fourth year – a London-wide project that encourages people to look after their local environment. The event on 11 June, which took place in and around the Narrow Way, provided 16 children with a masterclass in street cleaning, which included a demonstration of how chewing gum is removed from pavements.

> "The children have shown how important it is for us all to take ownership of our behaviour"

The children were also introduced to Hackney's new 'recycling on the go' litter bins, after which they visited St. John's churchyard, to learn how to separate out recycling from litter.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "The enthusiasm that the Mossbourne Academy students have for making our community cleaner and greener shows the pride that Hackney residents have in our borough."

SNT officer, Police Sergeant Guy Elsey, added: "This was a fantastic event to take part in. We enjoyed working with the children, and by teaming up with the Council we are playing a part in making Hackney cleaner."

Capital Clean Up is supported by Keep Britain Tidy, London Councils, the Metropolitan Police and local businesses.

Don't ruffle their feathers

IT'S that time of year when baby birds can often be spotted in Hackney's parks and gardens.

Calls from the public about the plight of chicks that appear to have fallen from nests have been flooding the phone lines of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds' (RSPB) London office recently.

But according to the charity, although these chicks may seem to be abandoned, interfering with them will do more harm than good, and the kindest thing is in fact, to do nothing.

The RSPB is advising people to let nature take its course, adding that the shaky period when chicks first leave the nest is all part of the natural process of a young bird learning to survive on its own.

Human intervention may lead to birds abandoning their chicks. Baby birds become independent around two to three weeks after they leave the nest. During this time, they appear motionless on the ground and chirp loudly.

If you want to give birds practical help, provide a shallow dish of water. This will ensure both the adults and young birds can bathe and drink. Leftovers like grated mild cheese, porridge oats and small pieces of un-salted cooked potatoes will provide them with energy, as will birdseed mixes, sunflower hearts, nyjer seeds and live or dried mealworms.

Composting is just champion

Residents from Gibson Gardens; the street where the composting scheme has begun (inset)

By Naomi Ocansey

RESIDENTS have welcomed the start of a composting scheme in Gibson Gardens, N16.

The project provides them with the opportunity to recycle food waste into compost, which is then used on a communal area to grow fruit, vegetables and herbs.

Those taking part received a caddy to store and transport food waste from their kitchens to composting units. They also received a variety of outdoor composting equipment.

Three composting champions from Gibson Gardens will act as caretakers for the project and a point of contact for residents.

It is hoped that four tonnes of waste will be diverted from landfill each year as a result of the project, which was funded by North London Waste Authority, and delivered by the Council's recycling team with support from London Community Resource Network.

Residents got together on 3 June to help assemble composting units, while Hackney's Doctor Compost gave a short presentation on what food waste could be recycled through the scheme.

One of the Gibson Gardens' project champions, Adelaide Turnbull, said: "The residents are buzzing with excitement, and the composting will be a great success.

"Our previous system couldn't cope with the amount of food waste that we were putting in it.

"We can't wait to use our own compost for our food growing plans."

ARTISTS and schoolchildren have been knee-deep in magazines, glitter, stickers, bindis and family photos to show what it's like to live in Hackney in 2010.

Pupils from six Hackney schools have collaborated with six international artists for a free exhibition called 'Hackney's Here!', which demonstrates some of the ambitions and achievements of the borough's young people.

The three to nine-year-olds were challenged to fill the 4,300sq ft outdoor courtyard at Space gallery to create large-scale artworks, ranging from large concertina photo albums and costumes based on local buildings, to bunting and giant collages.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for our children to demonstrate and develop the creative energy they are bursting with," said Veronica Frankland, Deputy Head of St Dominic's RC School, E9.

The other primary schools involved were Berger, Lauriston, Morningside and Orchard, as well as Wentworth nursery, all based in E9.

Hackney's Here! runs until 3 July at Space Studios, Mare Street, E8.

For more information visit: www.spacestudios.org.uk

The 'Hackney's Here!' exhibition has been developed by SPACE in partnership with East Hackney Education Action Zone and The Learning Trust. It features artists: Chila Burnman, Polly Brannan, Helen Marshall, Leslie Kulesh, Harold Offeh and Charlie Woolley

Schools battle it out at boccia

PUPILS from across Hackney have battled it out in a tournament of the Paralympic sport boccia.

Children from Jubilee, Whitmore, Tyssen, Berger, Brook Community, and St John the Baptist primary schools took part in the sport – similar to boules, the French variant of British lawn bowling.

Each school received six coaching sessions to prepare them for the day.

Over 100 young competitors were joined by Beijing 2008 Paralympic swimmer Dervis Konuralp, who presented awards to participants. The eventual winners were St John the Baptist's A team. Dervis is also Hackney's Olympic and Paralympic ambassador.

The event on 27 May took place at the SPACe sports centre in Hackney Community College and was organised by community organisation East End Sports Ability, with the support of the Council's 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games Unit.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Circus skills build confidence

PRIMARY pupils from Randal Cremer in E2, and Burbage in N1, are getting a leg up from local organisations in a bid to aid their transition to secondary school.

The children benefited from a day of circus skills training to help them develop confidence in preparation for the move to secondary school in September.

Staff from financial services firm UBS joined forces with Circus Space and the Bridge Academy to run the day.

The aim was to challenge pupils to come out of their comfort zones and work with people they had never met before, as well as make friends and adapt to new surroundings. Sandra Iheanacho, head girl at The Bridge Academy, said: "The primary school workshops were fun. It reminded me of how nervous I was when I first joined the Bridge Academy."

The event on 24 May was arranged by Hackney's education-business partnership Inspire!.

Pupils learnt a number of skills including the human pyramid

Centre visit goes swimmingly

TALENTED swimmer Jerry Ray Pearce was among the young athletes invited to visit the London 2012 Aquatics Centre site.

The 12-year-old pupil from the Petchey Academy in E8, won four gold medals and two silvers at the National Junior Championships for disability swimming earlier this year, and was successful in the London Youth Games disability swimming finals on 15 June.

She met Olympic medallist Stephen Parry, during the 9 June visit, who said: "We want our kids to be inspired by 2012 – that is what the bid was won on. By coming down here and seeing the Aquatics Centre, these swimmers will go away motivated about their sport and inspired about what is going to take place here in two years time."

A Midsummer Night's Swing, Stoke Newington Town Hall, N16

Part of 101 Things To Do This Summer; until 17 July, various locations

MUSICAL director Guy Barker and guests from New York's Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra put on a night of blistering swing at the newly-refurbished Stoke Newington Town Hall.

The big band, big bang evening was assembled under bandleader Guy Barker and brought top class musicians from both sides of the Atlantic. Guests from Jazz at Lincoln Center included trumpeter Terell Stafford and trombonist Wycliffe Gordon, who played alongside UK jazz masters such as trumpeters Nathan Bray and Byron Wallen, trombonists Mark Frost and Winston Rollins and saxophonists Jason Yarde, Shabaka Hutchings and Alan Barnes. Supported by the Council, the night was part of the Barbican's '101 Things to Do This Summer' series of events.

Young musicians got a chance to perform at the Barbican freestage on 17 June, as support to the opening concert by The Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra. And three visiting musicians came to the City Academy Hackney in Homerton on 8 June to see some of East London's future jazz stars in action; to rehearse with them; and to pass on some wisdom to help them polish their act.

A selection of the work on display at Whose Map Is It?

Views on the map

By Kate Gibney

Whose Map Is It? Iniva at Rivington Place, Rivington Street, EC1, until 24 July.
NINE contemporary artists from across the globe use Rivington Place's adaptable space to explore new approaches to mapping. Using film, installation, print and audio, the artists engage with social and political issues, and new technologies.
A Thames river map focusing on the north-south London divide; an interactive magnetic puzzle map of the Middle East; and an audio installation about the history of rumba are some of the ways artists have used maps and mapping techniques.
Artist Susan Stockwell's, River of Blood (above), created for the venue's huge front window, is made up of an intricate network of red tributaries to form the iconic image of the Thames river map. Using vinyl cut-out local road maps she draws parallels between city roads and human arteries, investigating the north versus south London divide that the capital's citizens frequently highlight.
A full programme of talks, tours and screenings accompanies the exhibition. Artists Alexandra Handal and Susan Stockwell will discuss their work at a talk on 1 July at 6.30pm; and curators Christine Takengny and Teresa Cisneros will discuss questions raised by the exhibition and their recent work with exhibiting artists Gayle Chong Kwan and Emma Wolukau-Wanambwa at 6.30pm on 22 July.
On 8 July, there will be an opportunity to discuss who defines the space we encounter, focusing on the content and meaning of the map today.
Mapping Shoreditch: hidden histories, contemporary lives also takes place on 3 July, from 10am-5pm, or 12-7pm. Participants are invited to get creative with a camera on an interactive photo safari exploring East London with prizes for the most inspired entries. Visit www.shootexperience.com to book your place. Tickets cost £10.

Bring a letter for me

By Marcel Reinard

Keep Me Posted, 67 Wilton Way, E8, 2 July-26 September

I'LL admit, I find it a little romantic to receive post. Not two-for-one offers from the pizza shop, although they come close, but a good old-fashioned, handwritten letter on a bright envelope.

New exhibition Keep Me Posted, part of the Posted project funded by the Council, taps into my own – and I'd expect a large number of others' – fascination with the medium. It explores the General Post Office (GPO), the institution that helped define it.

The exhibition of newly commissioned and loaned artwork across disciplines features established and emerging artists, including Andreas Blank, Claire Brewster, Jo Broughton, Oliver Clegg, Julie Cockburn, Adam Dix and Tracey Emin.

The old GPO was an invaluable institution in the UK; the service delivered up to eight times and day and was often relied upon to make same day distributions. Some, including the curators, have some concern that the uniformity of e-mail and other digital medium removes the personal nature of handwritten letters and fears some young people today have never experienced communication by post. They hope the Posted exhibitions will inspire people to put pen to paper again, as well as remind us of a time when communication was more personal and less generic.

Perhaps it really was the style and idiosyncrasies of handwriting that kept me fascinated with letters for all of these years. Perhaps they just remind me of Postman Pat.

Get into the music

Bashy performing at the Youth London: Into Music launch for CREATE09

By Akilah Russell

YOUNG people will get the chance to learn how to make a number one record with successful producer, Dawood, during two specialist workshops for young people aged 16 to 25.

Developed by Rising Tide, the event called 'Strip It Down' will be held at the O2's British Music Experience exhibition space at the North Greenwich arena on 3 July.

Dawood, producer of Roll Deep's recent number-one hit 'Good Times', will 'strip down' his chart topping track and re-build it in front of a live audience of up to 80 young people.

Special invited guests are also set to appear and perform to the rebuilt track in front of the live audience.

There will be two seminars, with a chance to ask questions from 2-3pm and 4-5pm.

The event is part of Young London: Into Music (YLIM), a programme of mentoring and live music events to promote and support the next generation of music-makers from the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic host boroughs.

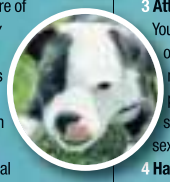

YLIM is a key strand of CREATE10, the annual arts festival organised with help from the London boroughs of Hackney, Greenwich, Newham, Tower Hamlets and Waltham Forest.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Channel 4 seeks young talent

CHANNEL 4 has opened its doors to young people who want to get into the media industry through a series of pioneering internships.

With little or no experience needed to apply, the national broadcaster has broken down barriers so that young people can work and train in various aspects of the business – in paid roles – in a bid to increase diversity in the media.

Channel 4 intern and Middlesex University graduate, Shareen Ali, 22, has been working as a commercial assistant since February.

She said: "I didn't think that I could get into mainstream media straight away. It really is about getting your foot in the door, and getting a chance to prove yourself – and this is really a great way to do that.

"My advice to anyone who wants to get into the media is to work hard. Don't give up because there are opportunities out there like this."

The vocational placements offer successful applicants a chance to work while still training in their roles. Shareen added: "I have had loads of training. Plus you are actually given responsibility and things to do, so you are not just sat at your desk doing nothing or making tea."

> "The artwork in this exhibition has a special therapeutic purpose"

Creative minds

Patients from Homerton hospital's Neurological Rehabilitation Unit have produced artworks for the exhibition at Hackney Museum

By Miranda Yates

POWERFUL and unusual artwork created by patients from Homerton hospital's Neurological Rehabilitation Unit has gone on display at Hackney Museum.

The experimental works evolved over 12 months, during art-therapy sessions utilising patients' journals, scrapbooks, albums, dream diaries and sketchbooks.

The artworks reflect the patients' experience of trauma, treatment and recovery.

Shaun Caton, Homerton hospital's in-house art teacher and exhibition curator, introduced patients to artists who have volunteered to help guide them through the creative experience.

He said: "The extraordinary artwork in this exhibition has a special therapeutic purpose in the lives of people with brain injuries at Homerton hospital.

"Making images can give language to people who may have lost the power of the spoken word, it can also help individuals to come to terms with complex trauma."

Brain Boxes and Boundless Books runs at the museum in Reading Lane, E8, until 18 September.

Training the brain

BRAIN injury survivors from a local charity took part in a study to evaluate whether playing electronic games, even for 15 minutes a day, can significantly improve memory.

Headway East London worked with Linton Khor, a PhD student from London Metropolitan University, on the project.

The study involved 64 people, aged from 20 to 71, who had suffered brain injury, stroke and dementia.

The results revealed that performance during traditional memory tasks, favoured by psychologists, did improve after using brain-training games on handheld devices such as iPhones.

Linton said: "In recent years we have discovered the brain is like a muscle. There is the potential for new cells to grow if they are exercised."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Explaining changing care

THE Department of Health's National Director for Social Care Transformation is due to speak at a free conference. There is still time for local organisations that provide health, wellbeing, advocacy, or brokerage services for residents, to sign up for the event and join the Council in planning for the future.

By the end of this year, people will be able to choose their own care services. This means local organisations will need to radically change the way they work to operate well in this new environment.

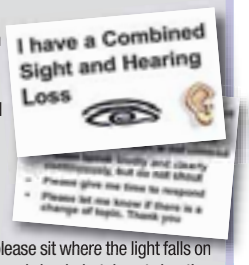

The event, at Stoke Newington Town Hall on 24 June, is part of the Transformation of Adult Social Care programme, and aims to make sure local organisations are ready for the changes that will take place by the end of 2010. Booking is essential.

To find out more, or to book, call: 020 8356 4524; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/trasc

Tips to aid communication

A TIPS card has been launched to help people with combined sight and hearing loss communicate in public.

As part of national Deaf Blind Awareness Week from 21 to 25 June, cards with five top tips to ease communication are being issued to people with combined sight and hearing loss. They include: 'please sit where the light falls on your face'; and 'speak loudly and clearly, but do not shout'.

Awareness of falls

THE HACKNEY Stop Falls Network is set to hold a series of community events for older residents in the borough.

One in three people suffer from a fall in later life every year. Age UK is encouraging older people to find out more about how to avoid these accidents.

The events are part of National Falls Awareness Week, from 21 to 25 June, and will take place at John Scott Health Centre, Green Lanes, N4 (21 June); Fellows Court Community Centre, Weymouth Terrace, E2 (23 June); Sam and Annie Day Centre, Northwold Road, E5 (24 June); and Wally Foster Community Centre, Homerton Road, E9 (25 June).

Making it work

RAISING DISABILITY AWARENESS

Simon Thorne, Learning Disabilities Development Manager

SIMON has been working in the Learning Disabilities team for the past 14 years. He is keen to raise awareness of its work and regularly offers to talk to other organisations through disability awareness training.

The team has recently moved to Maurice Bishop House in Reading Lane, adjacent to the Town Hall.

Simon said: "Everyone we see is individual, so we make sure that they can access all that's on offer, depending on their needs and abilities.

"We work with all ages, from school-leavers to the elderly, but we want to make sure that everyone gets a fair opportunity to fulfil their potential.

"People are referred to us by other services such as the NHS, and can also refer themselves.

"Having a learning disability can have so many other knock-on effects, such as poverty and depression. By improving opportunities to be more social, creative, or get paid employment, we've seen that people can be helped before they reach a crisis."

By Jennifer Riley

THE Council wants to take a lead to get employers to think about giving people with learning disabilities a chance to shine.

Hackney's Learning Disabilities team has recently made a film – 'Don't Walk By' – about supported employment, which focuses on its success in helping get the first person with a learning disability a job on the Olympic Park site.

The team works in partnership with the City and Hackney NHS to give people with learning disabilities, and their carers, the help and support that's right for them.

It runs workshops and classes, and also refers people on to other facilities in the borough.

Through its Hackney Recruitment Partnership service, the team encourages people with learning disabilities into employment with their own personalised programmes.

So far, it has helped hundreds of people find jobs. This year is has also supported the creation of 20 new jobs.

One client, Dayo, who expressed an interest in acting got work as an extra on Holby City.

The team is now working with the Institute, Middlesex University to develop the first nationally accredited pre-entry ESOL training for people with learning disabilities.

Bohemian rhapsody

Clockwise from above: The Black and White House, rear view, watercolour attributed to T Fisher c1790; rear elevation showing east front during demolition in another watercolour by T Fisher, dated June 1796; The Black and White House as shown on Roger Root's 1741 plan of Hackney churchyard; The Brown Parlour showing stained glass coats of arms and plasterwork above fireplace, watercolour attributed to T Fisher c1790; undated drawings of stained glass coats of arms and ornamental plaster over the fireplace in the Brown Parlour

By Sally England, Local Studies Librarian

HACKNEY once boasted a number of attractive Tudor town houses, one of which was the Black and White House by the churchyard, south of St Augustine's Tower, in the Narrow Way.

Built around 1578 during the reign of Elizabeth I, the name seems to describe the older part of the house, which was constructed from lathe and plaster and therefore white, and a later addition made in the time of Charles II which was dark. This extension was built by Sir Thomas Vyner, who also added his initials to the front of the house and his coat of arms in a stained glass window pane. Also inside were the coats of arms of the first, unknown, owner along with those of the Merchant Adventurers and the Russian Company. They appeared in ornamental plaster work above the fireplace and also in the stained glass of the main chamber.

In the drawing room were the Royal arms of James I, Charles I, Frederick V the Elector Palatine, and the Duke of Holstein. The original reason for these arms being included is unknown, but they gave rise to speculation that the house had once been the country residence of the Elector Palatine, whose wife Elizabeth was the daughter of James I, although there is no evidence for this.

In his 'The Environs of London' of 1795, written when the house was about to be demolished, Daniel Lysons stated there was 'little reason' to believe the story, suggesting instead that the arms 'might have been placed there to commemorate some entertainment given to those illustrious personages'.

Sir Thomas Vyner died at the Black and White House in May 1665, and in 1683 the house and land were divided between Gloucestershire cousins Elizabeth Marchant, Edith Lambert and Elizabeth Tombs. By 1765, the house was being used as a school and in 1796, the heirs of the three cousins sold the property to the Ryder family, who in turn leased it to developers who pulled down the old mansion and built new houses.

Some of the new homes were constructed from materials reclaimed from the old building, and stone animals which were supposed to have come from either side of the mansion's doorway, were placed on the parapets. William Robinson described the statues in his 'History and Antiquities of the Parish of Hackney' in 1842 as being 'much mutilated by time' but bearing 'some resemblance to a Dog or Phynx in a couching position'.

After the house was pulled down, the old myth of the Black and White House being the home of the Elector Palatine was not forgotten: Frederick V had also briefly reigned as Frederick I of Bohemia, and the new buildings were thus named Bohemia Place, which is now the access road to Clapton Bus Garage.

Job Profile
Laura Bleaney

Consultant Social Worker talks to Hackney Today about her job

How does this role link with the Council's Reclaiming Social Work initiative?

Our Reclaiming Social Work units are smaller than in traditional social work teams and are made up of a Consultant Social Worker, Social Worker, Children's Practitioner, Unit Coordinator and part-time Clinician. The unit works together on all cases so there is a real sense of collective responsibility, but the Consultant Social Worker has overall responsibility for each case.

What are the benefits of this model for a Consultant Social Worker?

You get lots of opportunities to share ideas with other professionals which is great. You also get to develop management skills whilst continuing to be involved directly in cases.

What is most rewarding about working in this role?

It's brilliant being able to work with colleagues from different backgrounds – it means we can offer families a whole range of services and support. You can also work your way up while remaining connected to real social work and real cases.

What is most challenging?

It's very hard work and the Consultant Social Worker has to balance involvement in cases with allowing team members to take responsibility and initiative but it's well worth it.

How do you feel about working in Hackney?

I've been working in Hackney for two years now and I love it!

Skills to stay safe

A young cyclist learns some bike maintenance skills

By Marcel Reinard

YOUNG people in Hackney are being offered free cycle training.

The weekly sessions are open to all residents aged under 15 and are being run by STA Bikes at the Concorde Centre on the Kingsmead estate, Clapton.

The project offers workshops that will show young residents the basic skills needed to stay safe on the roads. Practical advice on how to maintain and repair bicycles will also be provided. The scheme was launched with support from Sanctuary Housing. Stephen Wells, its resident involvement officer, said: "With summer fast approaching and the days getting longer, more and more young people will be outside on their bikes.

> "We hope that these free classes can provide young people with the skills they need to stay safe"

"We hope that these free classes can provide young people with the skills they need to stay safe on London's busy roads and encourage more kids out onto bicycles."

Last year, STA Bikes won the Best Community Cycling Initiative at the London Cycling Campaign Awards. The group won for its innovative work increasing cycling in areas where take-up has been traditionally low.

The next workshops take place on 24 June and 1 July.

£12k for cyclists

THREE cycling groups have been awarded over £12,000 to help them encourage different community groups to get on their bikes.

Hackney City Farm's 'Bust Stop Cycle Start' received £4,933; Wentworth Nursery School and Children's Centre, E9, got £2,939; and £4,762 went to Shacklewell Primary School, E8.

The funding was part of over £200,000 from the Community Cycling Fund for London, a grant scheme supported by Transport for London (TfL) and administered by the London Cycling Campaign.

Grants of up to £5,000 – or £10,000 for exceptional projects – are available every year to cycling, school, community and charity groups.

Bust Stop Cycle Start works with the community providing pool bikes to encourage cycling as an alternative to public transport.

Hackney City Farm Environment and Enterprise Manager, Gustavo Montes de Oca, said: "The funds will enable us to address the issues of congestion, pollution and carbon emissions, while improving people's well-being and independence."

Tackling the bike thieves

The team aims to cut theft and vandalism

A DEDICATED police team aims to tackle the problem of stolen and vandalised bikes in London.

The Met's new 30-strong cycle task force will patrol London's streets by bike, investigating and tackling cycle theft and criminal damage.

Funded by Transport for London (TfL), the team will also run sessions on bike marking and registration and give London's cyclists advice on how to lock up their bikes securely in order to deter theft.

TfL is also working with manufacturers, retailers and other partners to introduce a code of practice to encourage cycle retailers and online sellers to follow new guidelines before selling a second hand bicycle.

Plans to establish one single database to record details of all marked bikes in London are underway and this will help police and retailers identify and verify the legitimate owner of bikes that have been stolen or are being resold.

Steve Burton, TfL's Director of Community Safety, Enforcement and Policing, said: "London's a great place to get around on a bike, but the experience of having your bicycle stolen or damaged, or the fear that it will happen, stops many people from cycling – which makes us even more determined to crack down on cycle theft in the capital."

Residents can comment on a draft plan detailing what TfL and the police have done, and plan to do, to prevent and deter the risk of cycle theft or criminal damage of bikes.

Helping hand for uneasy riders

Help is at hand for residents looking to get back in the saddle

THE Council is offering 'rusty' adult cyclists a chance to regain their confidence with a refresher ride on 26 June.

Part of National Bike Week 2010, the ride from 10am to 1pm, starts and ends in Millfields Recreation Ground, E5. Qualified cycling instructors will lead residents along cycle paths through the Lea Valley Reserve to help cyclist regain their confidence.

Bike mechanics will also be on hand to check participants' cycles before the ride sets off.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "I hope those who have not been on a bicycle for a while will take up the challenge, dust off their bikes and sign up for a cycle refresher ride, and again make use of our excellent cycle routes and facilities."

Cyclists must register before the event. For info, or to book a place, e-mail: movegreener@hackney.gov.uk

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilites, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, confirm surgery times or for councillor contact details, call: 020 8356 3373.

have your say

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Water House – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch.

Chef Ben Spice gives a proud local take on a summer classic.

He explains: "Wild pigeon has a sweet, gamey flavour, which is superb at this time of year when matched with the exciting array of salad leaves springing out of the ground. Eating pigeon also helps to promote both a healthy and diverse landscape."

Wild pigeon salad

Serves two

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
15 mins

Ingredients

- 2 pigeon breasts
- 2 heads of chicory
- 400g sorrel leaves
- 2 slices of dry cure organic bacon
- 500g watercress
- 3 radishes
- Teaspoon of pommery mustard
- Tbsp oil
- A wine glass of olive oil
- A good glug of sherry vinegar
- Tbsp or more of honey to taste
- 2 cloves garlic
- Bunch tarragon
- Teaspoon butter
- Tbsp oil (not olive).

Method

- Slice your bacon into strips, cook until crispy and then reserve
- Finely chop a good pinch of tarragon and crush the two garlic bulbs into your hot pan with a splash of oil
- Add the pigeon breasts and after 30 seconds throw in your butter and then turn. Give the breasts another minute or just over to colour and then remove and reserve in a bowl. You are aiming for lovely moist pink meat, so be brave and don't over do it
- Add a splash of water to your pan and deglaze all of the delicious juices. You can pour these over the breasts and while they rest they will soak in all that fabulous flavour
- Mix olive oil, sherry vinegar, mustard, honey, and a pinch of salt
- Wash and refresh the salad leaves and wash and finely slice the radishes
- Mix bacon, leaves and radishes and arrange in a dish. Slice the pigeon and arrange in a fan on top
- Pour over your dressing and serve.

Top tips

- Fruits and vegetables lose nutrients and flavour rapidly, especially in the first 24 hours after they're harvested, so the sooner you can get to them the better
- Avoid bags of salad preserved in gas that appear fresher than they really are, and go for good handfuls of locally farmed leaves instead.

Water House is a social enterprise that trains local people in the ethos of eco-friendly best practice in the restaurant industry.
Owned by Shoreditch Trust, its profits go back into a regeneration programme for the local area.

Cultural investment

HAVE your say on a draft cultural strategy, published by the Greater London Authority (GLA). It sets out the vision, priorities and recommendations on how to strengthen the cultural life of Londoners across the capital.
The strategy recognises the significance of the cultural and creative sectors in making London a successful world city. It puts forward a case for continued support and investment – particularly in the run-up to the 2012 Olympics – and the opportunity it presents for London to undertake a step-change in cultural activity and participation.

The strategy puts forward a case for continued investment in the run-up to the 2012 Games

The GLA would like to know what you want from arts and culture in London – what is good, what you enjoy, and what might be improved.
The consultation runs until 6 September and the final strategy will be published in late 2010.

Hackney

LISTINGS

KEY: ART - DANCE - FAMILY - FESTIVALS - MUSIC - TALKS - THEATRE - WALKS

After the success of last year's festival, CREATE is back with the very best home-grown, world-class talent from across east and southeast London. From art and music to dance and theatre, CREATE is a unique cultural programme that's all about taking part – so roll up to the Right Side of London and join in.

CREATE has grown out of the cultural partnership of the five host boroughs of the 2012 Olympics: Greenwich, Hackney, Newham, Tower Hamlets and Waltham Forest. As an emerging international festival, CREATE will return every summer leading up to and following the Olympics.

Details of what is happening in Hackney as part of CREATE10, as well as in Hackney's fringe festival are in this guide, designed to be pulled out and kept all summer!

12 INSIDE/OUTSIDE CINEMA

WHEN 17 JULY 2010; 4-11PM
WHERE GILLETT SQUARE, LONDON N16 8JN HACKNEY

Portavilion is a portable, expanding, public art project that takes a different shape every time. This summer, the Portavilion project is carried by German art & architecture collective Raumlabor-Berlin. Their installation ROSY (the ballerina) is a mobile, bubble-shaped pavilion that pops up and turns into an ever-changing social art space.

For one evening only in Gillett Square, the bubble will be transformed into a temporary cinema presenting films from Hackney Archives and Dalston's Rio cinema; artists' animations brought to the programme by the Drawing Room; a film about the first British feminist and Hackney resident Mary Wollstonecraft by Hackney based Fragments & Monuments film and performance company, and a dance-film exploring Dalston's public spaces, made by local residents and East London Dance. Local residents are encouraged to bring in footage or images of Hackney and Dalston and its rapid change which may be later displayed in Hackney Museum. During the evening, the Portavilion bubble will come alive with projections on its surface and films will be screened along with music.

Open The Gate is proud to open its doors to the public for the first time with this exhibition of African photographs by Pierre Vannoni, French photographer and founder of Let's Draw Together (Puisons Ensemble), charity whose aim it is to help the development of African villages. Pierre Vannoni's work witnesses the relationships he has established over the last 15 years with his friends on the African continent, including artists, nomads and fishermen. This exhibition invites the public to respond to the work – by drawing – and open up dialogue. The displayed photographs will be sold to help fund a well in Chad.

BIG DANCE LEAD UP WORKSHOP

WHEN 8 JULY 2010 6-8PM
WHERE HOMERTON LIBRARY HOMERTON HIGH STREET E9 6AS

This will be the first time that members of the public will see 30+ young participants' in beautiful carnival costumes dancing and performing with the public in Tropical Isles' four hour showcase. Holding a public workshop in Gillett Square Dalston along Kingsland High Street, Tropical Isles' aim is to engage as many members of the public and communities to join in and have some fun. The dance routines and workshop sessions will give the wider diverse community of Hackney and East London the chance to get involved and do some carnival dancing while they are doing their shopping.

Produced by Hackney Design, Communications & Print • June 2010 • PJ41983

Tropical Isles is also aiming to get as many young people participating, especially those that have never been involved in dance activities and dance workshops.

This will be another opportunity for young people to gather and network to encourage more young people to participate for as long as they want to keep on dancing.

Tropical Isles will be promoting the Big Dance in showcasing carnival as one element of dance forms and to increase participation in physical activity in London in the lead up to the Olympic and Paralympic Games in 2012 and beyond.
